

I request respectfully that the FCC should not implment any proposal which would lessen Indiana's telephone privacy law. It has been pure bliss for me not to be bothered by constant calls during dinner or my quiet time at home. I really do believe in our houses as our castles and I resent enormously being distrurbed in 'my castle.' The Indiana law has been very effective--I rarely get more than one call a month whereas I got many a week before the law. I believe strongly that Indiana's law safeguards our homes'peace and quiet and that any diminution of it would lessen the quality of our lives. If the FCC does anything, I would request them to create a law more stringent than Indiana's so that we will not be disturbed.
